mountain GOLF

“The best collection of mountain golf east of Rockies.”

High in Virginia’s Blue Ridge Mountain lies one of the nation’s premier four-season golf destinations - Wintergreen Resort. Wintergreen’s 11,000 acres extend from the Blue Ridge Mountains to the valley below. With its mountaintop and valley locations, the resort offers two distinctly different golf experiences. Play the newly renovated Devils Knob, the highest course in Virginia at 4,000 feet and is known for cool summer temperatures and outstanding conditions. Or golf year round in the valley on our nationally ranked Stoney Creek course, with 27 holes designed by world-renowned golf course architect Rees Jones. Whether you come as a resort guest, a day golfer or part of a golf group, Wintergreen golf will elevate your game.

Golf Academy

Now put yourself in that picture.*

This is the philosophy behind the instruction at Wintergreen Golf Academy. Pairing the optimum elements of video technology and biomechanics with individual golf instruction, the Golf Academy features the scientific teaching system ModelGolf, a program that combines instruction and comparative analysis, via a patented ModelOverlay process, allowing students to learn their optimum stance and swing for every shot.

The staff uses their observations to provide a personal development plan, giving the student an outline for their future success, and will also set up a personalized website for the golfer, allowing students to view their swings and to study recommended drills.

Whether you are a beginner, mid or low handicap golfer, Wintergreen’s instruction programs and qualified golf professionals are here to help you achieve your golf goals.

Devils Knob

A classic layout by legendary golf course designer Ellis Maples, a second-generation disciple of the great Donald Ross, Devils Knob Golf Course is perched atop the Blue Ridge Mountains. Its elevation of 3,850 feet positions it as the highest golf course in Virginia, providing majestic, 50-mile views of the Shenandoah and Rockfish valleys.

Built largely on rock formations, Devils Knob features numerous natural stone outcroppings that give it a unique character. At a maximum 6,801 yards, Devils Knob is a charming experience, attractive to various levels of golfers. With newly renovated greens and increased length, Devils Knob still demands accuracy from tee to green. The course combines tight dog-legs and devilishly sloped greens. Dramatic elevation drops craft a distinct flair, as well as unique challenges from start to finish.

Perennially ranked as one of Virginia's best courses and recognized nationally for superb course conditions, the altitude provides some extra carry on most golf shots, as well as a welcome escape from the summer heat, normally keeping mid-day temperatures in the 70s and 80s.

Stoney Creek

Flowing through the fertile floor of the historic Rockfish Valley, the 27-hole Stoney Creek Golf Course basks beneath the Blue Ridge Mountains in a setting that is as relaxing as it is challenging. Stoney Creek's spectacular combination of three nines, each designed by world-renowned golf course architect Rees Jones, provide a year-round escape for every level of golfer, from serious competitor to vacationing beginner.

Immaculate fairways wind through a natural mountain setting with panoramic views. Traditional in design, it incorporates natural springs and native habitat, including Lake Monocan and Stoney Creek, with all three nines offering generous landing areas, few forced carries, several effective elevations changes and large, deceptively contoured greens.

The three nines are named the Monocan, Shamokin and Tuckahoe, each observing the region's Native American legacy. Jones designed each sequence of holes to be individually distinctive yet collectively cohesive, all blending into the natural surroundings that look up some 3,000 feet to the tips of the mountain range.
